THANKS BE TO GOD

GRATITUDE FOR THE GLORIOUS PRIVILEGE OF SHARING IN THE "HARVEST OF RIGHTEOUSNESS."

TO THE CHILD of God every day is Thanksgiving Day. Gratitude must be the "special order of the day" when we recognize that "Every good and perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father . . ." (James 1:17, NIV).

That's why Christians find it perfectly natural to offer thanks before eating their meals. From earliest childhood I remember repeating this prayer in unison with the other members of our family before we took the first bite of breakfast food:

- "Father, we thank Thee for the night,
- And for the pleasant morning light;
- For rest and food and loving care,
- For all that makes the world so fair.

Amen."

An appropriate prayer of thanks was repeated before lunch and dinner. We have perpetuated this tradition in our home, and now our children and grandchildren carry on this practice around their tables.

Table grace is good, but not good enough. The most appropriate demonstration of our thanks will be sharing our bounty with those around us. Whenever Christ gave thanks for food—at the feeding of the five thousand and the four thousand, at the Last Supper and again at Emmaus—He immediately began to give it to others.

The prayers we pray before we partake of our Thanksgiving dinners will have an empty ring about them if we haven't given food gifts to needy families. St. Paul put it like this:

Now he who supplies ... bread for food ... will enlarge the harvest of your righteousness. You will be made rich in every way so that you can be generous on every occasion, and through us your generosity will result in thanksgiving to God. This service that you perform is not only supplying the needs of God's people but is also overflowing in many expressions of thanks to God (2 Corinthians 9:10-12, NIV).

Furthermore, he makes it clear that at the very heart of Christian generosity is the sharing of the gospel. Material gifts are just the beginning.

... men will praise God for the obedience that accompanies your confession of the gospel of Christ, and for your generosity in sharing with them and with everyone else (v. 13, NIV, italics mine).

Cups of cold water must always be given in Jesus' name. Anything less is nothing more than humanistic "do-goodism."

Paul concludes this prayer with a climactic note of praise: "Thanks be to God for his indescribable gift!" (v. 15, NIV). The Father's greatest gift was His Son. Our grateful response must be to "broadcast" this Good News everywhere.

That's why our evangelists ma the sacrifice of separation from the families without any complaint. O of them wrote me recently: "Than For everything, thanks. Somethin great happened this morning people were sanctified!" It was I "thanksgiving day." Gratitude flow to God and the church for the pri lege of sharing full salvation w those who hunger and thirst for ric teousness.

That's why our missionari thankfully expose themselves to rigors and dangers of foreign s vice. Two dedicated Nazarene m sionaries and their children spen number of years in loving service the people in one of the most pr itive, remote areas of Papua N Guinea. Good gospel seed w faithfully sowed by these pionee The harvest seemed rather mea for a time. But an "evangelism plosion" is now taking place. Sco are being converted. Tribal chiefs abandoning their pagan idols a are surrendering their lives to K Jesus. In a few months, God willi I shall be ordaining the first Na rene elders in this area.

Thanks be to God for the gloric privilege of sharing in this "harv of righteousness" here at home, a by means of the Thanksgivi Offering, all over the world!

TRUST BRINGS THANKSGIVING

by IVAN A. BEALS

A THANKFUL HEART does not just happen. Songs of praise do not burst forth without cause. We give praise and thanks to the One in whom we find refuge. Across the centuries, thanksgiving has ever flowed from those who put their trust in God.

The Psalmist declared, "I love you, O Lord, my strength. The Lord is my rock, my fortress and my deliverer; my God is my rock, in whom I take refuge" (Psalm 18:1-2, NIV). From his youth, David had found the Lord to be a safe shelter in all his troubles.

As with David, when we call to the Lord, we find He is worthy to be praised. He guides our steps and protects our way. Even the bonds of death and the grave are broken through hope in Him. His divine presence defeats any foe. King David said, "Therefore I will praise you among the nations, O Lord" (Psalm 18:49, NIV).

Present-day Thanksgiving among U.S. citizens is rooted in our national heritage. The first pilgrims to America took trusting God seriously. For most of them, freedom to worship God according to their conscience was of greater import than possible economic gain. These thoughts impressed me as my wife and I visited the Plymouth, Mass., area this fall.

It was no small hop of faith to launch from the seacoasts of Holland and England, trusting God for religious refuge. Those who desired to separate from the state religion were forced to seek a new land to live in freedom. Leaving the leaky Dutch Speedwell behind, a combined party of 102 passengers and 30 crew members boarded the seaworthy Mayflower. God willing, they would survive and worship in freedom in the new world.

They sailed from Plymouth Harbor, England, and crossed the Atlantic to the North American shore in two months. The journey itself required trusting. The crossing was marred by storms, disease, and several deaths. The crowded quarters of the passengers below deck added to their hardships. Mayflower II, the fullscale replica, built in England and sailed to Plymouth in 1957, shows the cramped quarters.

When the original Mayflower anchored in Cape Cod Bay in November 1620, the Pilgrims bowed down and thanked God for land—their "proper element." Only trust in God carried them through that first winter. Half of the population died from scurvy and other diseases. The graves were later planted with corn in an effort to conceal the number of deaths from the Indians.

The following year, on November 19, a second British ship, the Fortune, arrived, bringing more English settlers. The colony began to grow and to prosper, and trust in God was vindicated. In memory of that testing time, a plaque on Burial Hill proclaims: "What your fathers attained with such difficulty, do not basely relinquish."

After the first successful harvest in 1621, the Pilgrims observed Thanksgiving. This distinctly American holiday tradition began as a festival with religious overtones. Our present Thanksgiving celebration is a blend of harvest festival, religious observances, and the commemoration of the Pilgrims' landing, known as Forefather's Day.

But Thanksgiving is more than a pious act of an ancient Israelite king. It is more than an American tradition, which now seems to be fading in religious value. Rather, it was meant to be a life-style stemming from the adopted motto: "In God We Trust."

Patriarchs, prophets, and kings of Israel were not the only ones to give thanks. New Testament Christians did not utter the final praise to God. Later, the Pilgrims displayed the natural outgrowth of thanksgiving from trust in God. Our forefathers long ago used the motto "In God We Trust" on national coins and currency. But trust in God and thanksgiving is a personal matter for all people.

Joining all believers before us, if you and I trust God, we too will give praise and thanks to God. Doubt allows silence and ingratitude. Dare to trust God, and you will not be disappointed. Whether these times find us in poverty or plenty, God's care will prevail. Truly trust Him, and praise and thanksgiving will flow from our lips and the works of our hands.

OBJECT TO "OBJECTION"

The music of today is different from when Pastor German was a youth, I'm sure. So let's let our young people have the music they like with the words they need. They may not get this witness from any other source. Contemporary Christian music is reaching more young people than some of us realize. It's a viable ministry and, I'm sure, blessed by God. I love the Lord and thank Please keep your letters brief (50-150 words). Letters responding to other letters are not printed. We cannot reply personally to letters not selected for this feature. He made no mention of the countless souls who have been touched at a Christian rock concert. A Hindu friend of mine was converted at one. Praise the Lord! He would have us believe that the church is able to reach all the young people and "teach" them to like hymns and church music. I was not raised in a church and my view of hymns was not very good for a long time. No one seemed to mean them when they sang. If Christian rock can reach a young man who has never been to church, I say, "By all means ... save some!"

Scott Stargel Columbia, South Carolina

Today's teens are looking for something they can hold on to. Now, I'm not saying I agree with all the "Christian" rock groups, because I don't. But at least, "Christian" rock promotes life and most of all, Christ. I believe if today's teens are going to be reached, it's got to be through music we teens can identify with.

Dimensions of Thanksgiving

by GERALDINE NICHOLAS

HANKSGIVING is a perfect time to recall people God has brought across our pathway for our benefit. This year I wrote to a couple who showed me a great measure of Christian love when I was a teenager. Through their lives I saw Christianity modeled effectively and realized that Jesus really did make a difference. I believe their influence played a large part in creating the desire to give my life to Jesus Christ. Many years have passed but I have never forgotten. I don't know if I ever thanked them "face to face." Even if I did, I wanted to say "thanks" again so they would know that the love and concern they showed back then is still appreciated.

I became aware of the value of this kind of follow-up several years ago after reading a beautiful article written by my first pastor. My heart was warmed as I remembered the influence of his ministry in my life. I wasn't sure that he would remember me but I wrote anyway and thanked him. His appreciative response told me we had both profited.

If receiving appreciation means so much to us, surely God is pleased when we express thanksgiving to Him, the Giver of all good things. What better Friend to we have? Where would we be without His love and nercy? What joy it must give our Heavenly Father to know His children are grateful for His blessings.

Most of us do not find it hard to be thankful for what has been. Past blessings are so plentiful in our memoies. God's guidance of the believer is abundantly evilent as one considers His providential care.

A few years ago my husband and I visited the island of St. Vincent for several weeks. We stopped in Barbalos on the way home and were unable to be reached when our youngest son, who was then nine, became GERALDINE NICHOLAS is a pastor's wife and free-lance riter from Abbotsford, British Columbia, Canada. very ill. My mother-in-law finally had to sign the necessary forms for his surgery in our absence. It was an enormous risk for her, yet she was told if the surgery was delayed, it could be fatal. I thank God that she took the risk. I'm grateful, too, for the doctor who urged her to do so.

How thankful we are for those who pray for us. Perhaps the greatest gift anyone can ever give is to pray for another—a friend or loved one needing salvation, someone who is experiencing pain, or someone grieving over the loss of a loved one.

I can recall many who influenced my life through prayer. I can also appreciate my parents' discipline and concern. How thankful I am to God for those who cared that much. From the perspective of hindsight, I can readily testify with thanksgiving that "All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose" (Romans 8:28).

But what about the present? If the current situation is less than pleasant, can I put my thanksgiving on hold until I am able to discern God's guidance and protection in retrospect? A loved one can be snatched away so suddenly. A freak accident can leave a healthy body helpless in an instant.

Take Cathy for instance. She and her family went tubing one sunny Saturday afternoon after a good Ontario snowfall. The inner tube tilted on the slope and hurled her head over heels. She lay helpless in the snow with a broken back and was left a quadriplegic. How does one possibly thank God in the face of such tragedy?

Surely God does not intend us to be thankful for the losses and tragedies we experience. The "whys" remain a mystery. Still, because we love and trust God, we can be thankful for His constant concern and mercy "... for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee" (Hebrews 13:5). He does not abandon us in adversity. Although we do not understand, we can trust Him. "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding" (Proverbs 3:5).

In the early years of my husband's ministry, we received a call at our home one morning. It was from a young woman in our congregation who suffered with rheumatoid arthritis. In a matter of months the disease had twisted her joints, causing extreme pain and immobility. Her voice that morning was exuberant with thanksgiving to God. Why? For the first time in months she had been able to exert enough pressure on the toothpaste container to get her own toothpaste to brush her teeth. Such a small thing for most of us, but cause for thanksgiving to her! Certainly God was glorified through her thanksgiving that morning. Her delightful expression of gratitude challenged my own heart to want to glorify more through expressed thankfulness.

The future is cause for thanksgiving as well. True, we don't know what's ahead but we can use our eyes of faith to see the blessings our great God has in store for His children. We have the confident hope that God has control of our future. My mother-in-law has often reminded me that "the future is as bright as the promises of God." What promises?

"My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:19).

"My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness" (2 Corinthians 12:9).

"The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Romans 6:23).

What treasures are ours in the future! How I thank God for His promises that are certain and dependable.

Truly God is great and greatly to be praised. Thanks be to God at this thanksgiving time for all of His blessings! "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!" (Psalm 107:8). \Box

The Mystery of the Valleys

Consider the suffering in the valleys the suffering of the sod broken and torn by the plow and the dying of seed sacrificed to the soil.

Consider the painful striving of tender new plants straining against the heavy earth, laboring to lift their heads from darkness to light.

Consider the suffering in the valleys the fertile green valleys where crops are grown.

DILOT POINT, TEXAS!

L It was Tuesday morning, October 13, 19 crowd of holiness folk from across the nation jammed into a tent that had been erected on the skirts of a little Texas town of 2,500 inhabitants.

When the sun rose over the Texas countryside that October morning, two Nazarene elders were putting the finishing touches on a chorus they intended to introduce to the crowd that day. The one was L. Milton Williams, former major in the Salvation Army, and the other, Rev. I. G. Martin. The two preachers had collaborated a year earlier in Chicago to write a chorus which was sung when the Association of Pentecostal Churches of America united with the Church of the Nazarene. For the 1907 assembly, the two had used the tune "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Now, deep in the southland, the duet thought it best to use the tune "Dixie."

On this same day in Boston, two clergymen announced they were resigning their pulpits and would open a New York office for the practice of psychology. They may have been spurred on by a Wisconsin bishop, who, according to newspaper accounts, claimed psychology dated from Christ.

In Chicago a Methodist Episcopal minister chose a different way to spend his vacation than formerly. Donning a threadbare, shiny blue suit with trousers worn at the edges, a cheap cotton shirt to match, along with a black felt hat, the well-known minister, thus disguised, visited nine wealthy Chicago churches. He was seeking to test the assertion of Socialists that churches scorned working men.

We know the reception that Chicagoan would have received had he visited the Church of the Nazarene in Los Angeles. Dr. Bresee always made an effort to make such individuals welcome by a personal greeting at the door.

Presbyterian ministers meeting in Kansas City discussed conducting Sunday night services in theaters across the nation; they hope to duplicate the success a Dr. W. Carter was enjoying in New York City.

Interestingly enough, Dr. Bresee, nearly a decade earlier, had considered renting a theater in Los Angeles when his efforts to find a new location for his church were becoming difficult. Bresee's proposal to rent a theater was abandoned due to high costs.⁵

Cabled news dispatches from Berlin that October day in 1908 reported the progress of the James Gordon Bennet Balloon Cup Race. In a bizarre turn of events, all balloonists had been caught in the same vortex of air and were going round and round.

At Pilot Point, the throng marched and shouted around and around the tent. This prompted one of our historians to state "... the Church of the Nazarene was born marching, and as long as we continue to march and follow the direction the Pilot points, we will keep the glory and blessing and favor of the Lord upon us."

"AMEN" IS NOT THE END

by H. LAMAR SMITH

A CHILDREN'S Sunday School class was asked the meaning of the word "amen." After a short silence one boy replied, "The end." Why not? It was the way he had heard prayers stop and church services end.

Actually "amen" means "so be it," "it is so," or "may it be so." It is an affirmation or endorsement of the words uttered.

The use of "amen" presupposes understanding and communication. Paul speaks of the necessity of clear communication in the service of worship, in 1 Corinthians 14. If one is speaking and the people cannot understand, you have a problem. "How will one . . . say the 'Amen' at your giving of thanks, since he does not know what you are saying?" (v. 16, NASB).

"Amens" exult in gospel truth. John said, "To Him who loves us, and released us from our sins by His blood, and He has made us to be a kingdom, priests to His God and Father; to Him be the glory and the dominion forever and ever. Amen" (Revelation 1:5-6, NASB).

"Amens" express belief in a specific truth. When truth is shared and someone else can say "amen," it affirms a common faith. The "amen" may mark the entrance of new light that has the familiar "ring of truth."

All of us probably know funny stories of people who said "amen" at the wrong time. But there are some not-so-funny uses of "amen" that happen in churches. It can be used as a dart aimed at another member or group in the congregation. One divided congregation, sitting on opposite sides of "liberal" and "conservative," took statements in the pastor's message, conceived as supporting their side, as opportunities to hurl "amens" across the church to the people who "really needed it." That's a tight rope for the pastor and a hangman's noose for the congregation.

Some congregations think the "amen" is the rhythm that makes the service "go." If this rhythm doesn't happen, they feel that God was not there. In such an environment I have heard a whole volley of "amens" go up in support of a statement that was not true. If you had asked them before the service to endorse the statement they would have refused. But caught up in the flow of the service they said "amen" to something they didn't believe and that wasn't true.

Saying "amen" commits us to the consequences of the truth expressed. Numbers 5:22 contains a principle valid for everyone. If a person gave the "amen" of endorsement to something that wasn't true in their lives they would abide under the curse of their sin.

I must be careful that I can say "amen" with sincerity. Jesus said to John, "Surely I come quickly." John's reply was, "Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus" (Revelation 22:20). If one is not ready for His coming, how can he say "amen" to the fact of His coming?

"Amen" makes us a participant as opposed to a spectator. Of course all of our "amens" need not be said audibly. But somewhere from deep within us we ought to be involved in the proclamation of the truth. That inward participation may be a mental response, a whispered amen, or a very audible one. It may be a facial response.

A few audible ones help to support and affirm the speaker. Good audience involvement can help make a preacher. It can be like "holding up the hands" of Moses.

"Amen" gives us opportunity to express our allegiance to the One whom Scripture calls "The Amen." He is "The Amen, the faithful and true Witness, the Beginning of the creation of God" (Revelation 3:14, NASB). How could Jesus be called "The Amen"? It is because His word is self-authenticating. He is His own

H. LAMAR SMITH pastors the Gardendale, Alabama, Church of the Nazarene.

n. His word is true because of who He is. He is true one affirms or confirms Him. But because He is, Pather does.

he Pharisees said to Jesus, "You are bearing witof Yourself; Your witness is not true." Jesus re-, "Even if I bear witness of Myself, My witness is for I know where I came from, and where I am g" (John 8:13-14, NASB). Only He who is "The n, the faithful and true Witness" could have made a claim.

amen" then becomes an affirmation of Jesus at. Whatever Jesus is I want to understand, so that whole life and being will proclaim "amen" ("He is is is the attitude of the inhabitants of heaven. m, blessing and glory and wisdom and thanksg and honor and power and might, be to our God er and ever. Amen" (Revelation 7:12, NASB).

Revelation we learn that when a multitude sang raises of Jesus Christ as "The Lamb that was for our salvation, the four living creatures kept g, "Amen" (5:5-14).

RECENTLY I heard a statement that jolted me: "Too many church bodies make a great fuss over celebrating anniversaries to keep their people from realizing that they are now dead or dying institutions."

I am a sentimentalist and very fond of remembering and celebrating the important milestones that I have passed on my journey of life. Birthdays have great significance for me. Being an admirer of statesmanship, February 12 and 22 will always have meaning for me because of the great Americans whose natal days we celebrate.

A marriage anniversary has great meaning to a couple who have been happily married across the years. I shall never forget helping my parents celebrate their 50th year of wedded bliss. The second day of June always recalls to me the day that I entered into wedlock with the most wonderful woman I have ever known.

The only value to me of celebrating these anniversary occasions is that it makes my present state of life more meaningful and vital. If all the good is in the past, then the present is dulled rather than enhanced by the festivities.

I have some rich deposits in my memory bank concerning the Church of the Nazarene. I can recall canvas tents with odors of straw and sawdust. I remember worship in storefront churches and converted dwellings. Revival meetings that continued for many days with faithful attendance are part of my recollection. Services that were marked with a sweet spirit and the demonstration of God's power are recalled clearly. I love to revel in the thoughts about those great days.

If, during this 75th anniversary year, I spend too much time in looking backward with longing, I shall miss seeing the opportunities that surround my present and the future. Someone has truthfully said, "Hats off in respect to the past; coats off for the confronting tasks of the present; and gloves off to the challenge of our future."

Our 75th anniversary observance can be a memorial stone that says "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." We shall not linger too long by the memorial, but we shall push ahead to fulfill our God-given mission! \Box

GIVING LIFE TO THE FUTURE

by TIMOTHY A. SMITH

MANY EVANGELICALS in all parts of the world feel out of step with fellow-believers who insist on unilateral disarmament and the renunciation of all war, as well as with those who advocate an American nuclear force strong enough to resist and perhaps overthrow Communism. Few voices are raised to help the moderate majority understand what it means to give their own nation (whether the United States, Zimbabwe, the Soviet Union, or Chile) the loyalty it requires while avoiding the possibility of the wanton destruction of most of our race.

Why are evangelicals splitting apart on this issue, and why has the great mass, who stand yet in the middle, found no voice to speak for them?

One explanation is that the news has seemed too bad to be true. Looking back across the past decade, we can now see that the race for first strike capability, which our political and military leaders have been at pains to deny, has moved us into a new era. The old policy of deterrence, sometimes called MAD (Mutual Assured Destruction), gave us a devilishly reasonable hope that no country would ever fire off the bombs in their steadily improving delivery systems. The new policy of nuclear war-fighting, forming since the mid-1970s, has now become undeniably official.

The current crisis in international affairs stems directly from this new race for an overwhelming firststrike capability. Nuclear war-fighting strategy assumes that neither we nor the Soviets will be able to wipe out all the opponent's weapons in an overwhelming first strike. Military debate in the United States, most of it secret, centers on whether our nation would be certain to come out the "winner" with an "endurable" number of casualties ranging from 5 million to 50 million. Casualties on the other side seem not to weigh in the balances at all. Until recently, just a select few have debated whether economic, ethical, religious, or political reasons justify subjecting half or more of the world's population, and the very structure of human civilization itself, to these awesome risks. (And only now are religious and secular leaders beginning to demand that their people join the debate.) Yet even though the situation is still only half-acknowledged, Bible-believing Christians realize in their hearts that they too must face the nuclear issues squarely and responsibly.

But for the Christian, the complexities of the issue become further complicated by religious traditions. None of our varied historical positions on peacemaking now seem adequate. The deep and continuing impulse to withdraw from the world, always strong among the anabaptist traditions, is now shared in one way or another by large numbers in every one of a dozen evangelical traditions. This impulse is fed by such notions as our easy substitution of personal spirituality for moral accountability, our fascination with the dispensationalist time clock, and our absorption in individual hope for eternal life. But withdrawing from responsibility for our neighbors seems as ethically awkward a response to Christ in the present situation as expounding the medieval "just-war" doctrine in an age when no war can bring justice to anyone, and nuclear war would bring horrible injustice to all.

Likewise deficient on practical as well as ethical grounds in the bilateral freeze posture that many evangelicals now espouse. Standing alone, such a freeze would leave both the Soviet Union and the combined NATO and United States forces with enough weapons to risk the destruction of the earth.

The other alternative policy of "peace through strength" ignores the central fact that to employ nuclear strength would destroy not only peace but also the lives of most of the human beings on earth. Moreover, the experience of the past 30 years does not support the notion that our achievement of superiority would frighten the Soviet leaders into submission or break their power to keep their own people in subjection. They, too, continue building their own fleet of first-strike weapons.

How, indeed, ought evangelicals respond to this new situation? Certainly, Bible-believing Christians should not allow divisions among their several parties to be shaped by appeals for withdrawal or to the calculus of endurable mass destruction. Our response must be, in short, biblical—which is at once immensely simple and incredibly complex. Consider, for example, four widely accepted propositions that do not yield simple prescriptions for action:

1. This world is indeed coming to an end. The details of our doctrines about the Second Coming may differ, but all of us affirm the Old and the New Testaments' declarations that human history moves toward both judgment and consummation. The central point in Scripture, however, is that judgment belongs to God. We dare not alter the meaning of the word maranatha to equate it with the coming of a man-made nuclear holocaust.

2. God's purpose, both in history and beyond it, is the renewal of humanity in righteousness and, in some of our views, of nature itself. That renewal has begun already, by grace, through the Holy Spirit's work in us. Marking ourselves channels through which the Spirit may fulfill this divine purpose is the Christian's task and the church's mission in every age. If wars and rumors of wars are to continue to the end, believers have no authorization to approve or support them, or to join in idolatrous veneration of those institutions of human government that pretend to execute the judgments of the Lord.

3. From Jeremiah's time forward, the Bible has renounced the spirit of nationalism, even while it has affirmed the divine ordination of human governments to keep the peace. Jesus and Paul scorned Jewish nationalism and affirmed that Divine Providence sustained the rule of what was then a "world" government. Both before and after that time, Jews who rejected the prophets justified war against Babylon and violent revolution against first their Greek and then Roman conquerors by corrupting the meaning of "covenant" and "chosen people." Jesus taught, in the words of Isaiah and Jeremiah, that the covenant with Israel was but a pathway. That is, it was God's means of offering the entire human race a new covenant of faith and righteousness that would bring shalom to all "Jerusalems." Selfish ethnic and national interests, when set over against the interests of other peoples, are opposed to the holy purposes of the God who "hath made of one blood all nations of men."

4. Finally—not because these are all the complexities but because the space for this article is limited the biblical way of seeking truth is not through polarized dialectics but through moral and spiritual community. To latch onto one extreme of radical logic and so magnify your differences with fellow believers who have followed an opposite and equally radical logic is not the way of either Moses or Christ. For it denies the two great commandments: love God supremely and our neighbors as ourselves.

The stark alternatives of either unilateral disarmament or a preemptive first-strike are not truly practical choices, either, even if we supposed one of them to be biblical. The American nation is light-years away from considering unilateral disarmament. And a first-strike decision is practical only in the sense that it can be done. But the outcome would be a worldwide reenactment of the Jonestown suicides.

The actual task Christians face is to persuade one or the other of the superpowers to take the initiative in nuclear disarmament—take the first step. No fight ever came to a halt by instantaneous bilateral agreement. One participant must step back first. The day when leaders of either the Soviet Union or the United States actually take that step, and demonstrate to the world they mean business, we will see positive results.

As for me, I pray now for repentance, for that deep rethinking of my moral accountability which, should I manage to survive a nuclear holocaust, would overwhelm me with remorse on the morning afterward. Each one of us is, in some measure, responsible. And to each of us is promised the outpouring of God's Spirit, enabling us, in these last days, to think, speak, and act in obedience to Him "whose mercy is upon all his works" and whose love knows no limits.

ONDAY NIGHT is "family night" throughout the Church of the Nazarene. But ask the average man on the street the significance of Monday night and many will respond, "Monday night football."

Now, I would quickly report that I have nothing against Monday night football; in fact, I have been known to block out Monday night myself.

But a recent headline in the Chicago-Tribune caught my attention: "Brewers to pour $40 million into TV football." The article reported that Anheuser-Busch and Miller Brewing will spend $40 million to sponsor 23 pro football telecasts on TV, 16 of which are on Monday night, 3 on Thursday, and 2 on Sunday.

I had just attended Zig Ziglar's seminar at the International Laymen's Retreat in Toronto. He had asked, "Why do they spend so much to sell?" He suggested that they are willing to spend so much on advertising because they believe for each dollar expended they will sell $10.00 worth of merchandise. Hence $40 million times 10 is $400,000,000—that is a lot of zeroes and a lot of beer.

Zig demonstrated TV's effect by stopping in his presentation for a drink of water. Slowly he poured the water, then slowly he drank the water, then he licked his lips. Before he started, no one wanted water. But by the time he had finished, in 28 seconds, he had everyone in the place thirsty. He demonstrated the power of persuasion.

Oh, but we're not beer drinkers. Well, what about the children and teens who sit watching pro celebrity after pro celebrity pointing out the virtues of beer?

I thought of that passage in Deuteronomy, "Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your strength" (6:5, NIV). Again, no problem.

However, if I read further in that passage, the words disturb me. "These commandments that I give you today are to be upon your hearts. Impress them on your children. Talk about them when you sit at home..." (6:6-7, NIV, italics added).

Dare I add, "watching Monday night football"?

What is the effect on a child? Does he have difficulty reconciling what he heard the day before in Sunday School with what he hears on TV on Monday night?

However, what stunned me was an article two days later in the Louisville Times reporting on a candy-filled beer lookalike, "Chug-a-Can." So Dad has his Michelob; now Junior has Pickelob. I quote:

Chug-a-Can, which costs 30 cents to 60 cents per can, contains tiny, sweet balls similar to jawbreakers. It comes in 20 different "brands," looking like the real thing with their fliptop opening and "Don't Litter" imprint on top. Pickelob carries a drawing of a pickle and a resemblance of the real brew's distinctive can design, but adds on the side, "Just a Joke ... Pure Fun."

HAROLD IVAN SMITH is a Nazarene layman, free-lance writer, and frequent speaker at seminars and conventions. He resides in Kansas City, Missouri.

Just a joke? Pure fun? In a nation where thousands are slaves to alcohol; where thousands will be killed as a result of drunken drivers; where heartache and hell are by-products, why would anyone find it "pure fun" for a seven- or eight-year-old to flip open his little pretend can . . . at any time?

But maybe during some of those commercials, parents need to "talk about abstinence." The ancient Jews were instructed, "Write them on the doorframes of your houses and on your gates" (6:9, NIV) and in today's world that may mean "over the television."

Be aware of this: advertisers aren't solely concerned with today's consumers but are equally investing in the consumer of the future, your child. Beer is well on its way to becoming as common as ice tea in too many settings.

Remember, according to the Chicago-Tribune, "The typical Monday Night Football game will reach about 17.5 million households."

No one will spend $150,000 for a 30-second commercial if he doesn't believe he can increase his sales.

Commercials bypass our doorframes and our gates but not the impressionable minds of our children and teens. There's nothing wrong with Monday Night Football, but there is something wrong with those who advertise on it.

NAZARENE

PENTECOSTAL MISSION, NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE

"There was Brother Willie Jones, a plain misfit by the rules of commerce and society. ... I guess he was a 'diamond in the rough.' Our early holiness people might well have considered themselves all to have been 'diamonds in the rough.' ... Willie Jones found a place with Brother McClurkan. He served as City Missionary for the Pentecostal Mission. After all, the Mission Hall on Jo Johnson Avenue was in a slum area of Nashville. Close by was the red light district. Brother Willie had a needy parish for his ministry of praying, testifying, holding street meetings, handing out tracts, and inviting other misfits and derelicts of society to come to the preaching services at the mission."

At the 1902 annual meeting, Willie Jones reported, "Have made more than 100 talks in missions, jails, on the streets, and in diverse other places. Have made more than 100 visits and prayed with persons in their places of businesses and other wheres. Have spoken to more than 1,000 persons personally about their souls. We have rejoiced daily in the precious privilege in offering the people a Saviour who can save them from all sin, and who is anxious to take every burden of theirs and carry it for them. . . ." (Benson, Jr., A History of the Pentecostal Mission, pp. 49-50.)

One of the most interesting aspects of Nashville's Pentecostal Mission was its diversity of ministries. Not only an inner-city mission to the socially rejected, the mission also contained a school for training Christian workers, a gymnasium, a publishing program, a boarding house, a camp meeting association, and a tabernacle for religious services. Its participants included both whites and blacks, social outcasts and the families of prosperous businessmen. Members of the Tulip Street Methodist Church, one of Nashville's most venerable congregations, provided both leadership and support for this ministry. However, at the center of all this diversity existed a motivating holiness faith in the redeemability of any man through Christ.

Soon after the death of its founder and superintendent, J. O. McClurkan, the Pentecostal Mission united with the Church of the Nazarene in April 15, 1915, bringing with it several southern congregations, Trevecca Nazarene College, and missionary work in Cuba, Guatemala, Argentina, and India.

E VANGELIQUE?" "DIRECTOR." "EGLESIA?" "NAZARENO."

"AAAAH, NAZARENO!"

This kind of exchange took place over and over when I was in Amsterdam, and in each case a note of recognition let me know, even though our languages differed, that this person from another country knew about the Church of the Nazarene. It was a pleasant surprise. But this was not the greatest surprise that the International Conference of Itinerant Evangelists brought me while I was in Amsterdam.

Only hours before my departure from the States on July 12, I was asking myself, as many Christian leaders probably were, "How can itinerant evangelism possibly be important enough to require 10 days of conference time?" No one, it seemed, not even the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, realized what a responsive chord they had struck in calling for such a gathering.

They began their plans cherishing the hope of perhaps as many as 2,500 evangelists assembling in Amsterdam. Even with registration limited to persons truly involved in itinerant (traveling) evangelism, by the opening day of Amsterdam '83 more than 10,000 applications had been received, from which 5,000 par ticipants were accepted.

A common question between persons getting ac quainted was, "Are you an evangelist?" Almost exclu sively the answer was yes. Everyone was surprised a the number of itinerant evangelists in the world. The came from 134 countries and by their presence at tested to the viability of itinerant evangelism through out the world!

Because of economic situations in some parts of the world, not all of them were full-time itinerants, but al were more than ministers who preached evangelistical ly. At least a portion of their time was spent traveling to evangelize and start new churches.

The response to Amsterdam '83 made it clear that itinerant evangelism, far from ecclesiastical obso lescence, was on the cutting edge of the worldwide growth of the Church. It is not a phenomenon of the Western world, or of the U.S.A. But neither is it simply the city-wide crusade nor the single church revival. Its essential character is mobility. It is the first activity o the Great Commission. It could correctly be called mission—but not foreign mission. It is national mis sion, next-door evangelism, and outreach in ever expanding concentric circles. That it is so alive and thriving in all these countries was a surprise to me.

There was a noticeable absence of denominational and para-church administrators. Even directors of evangelism were few in number. The Graham organization seemed committed to reaching the true itinerant evangelist.

Though ICIE was a select group, it was not elite to the exclusion of social strata or race or gender. "We have here," said an evangelist who had just received packets of clothing for himself and his family, "a picture of what it is going to be like in heaven." Franklin Graham, president of Samaritan's Purse, the organization responsible for procuring clothing for some of the needy evangelists, said, "Many of the evangelists have few clothes and they have come to the conference wearing their best."

Female participants spoke favorably of the conference. "We're focusing on the gifts, not our femininity," explained Susan Habib, graduate student at Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary. Marietje Mapalieij, lawyer, college professor, and Christian worker from Indonesia declared, "The Lord spoke only to disciples. There's no need for special instruction [for women]."

A Hindu priest who has joined the "Royal Priesthood of Jesus"; an evangelist from Irian Jaya who sold all his pigs but still didn't have enough to get to ICIE (the ICIE staff took up a collection so he could come); and Wendy Woods, a New Zealand "gypsy" who travels from church to church training for evangelistic outreach were all part of the flavor of ICIE. Billy Graham was like a patriarch. He openly declared this was the fulfillment of a lifelong dream. He was on the platform most of the time, introducing special speakers, even answering questions from the floor in a plenary session, and delivering three major addresses.

In the closing service Graham's final charge to the participants sprang from the depths of his soul as he proclaimed the theme of the conference: "Do the work of an evangelist! Do the work of an evangelist! Do the work of an evangelist!" Three times.

On the eighth day a slot of time was given for special groups to convene. It was thrilling to meet with nearly 20 itinerant Nazarene evangelists from 11 different countries. Juliet K. Ndzimandze, from Manzini, Swaziland, conducts crusades in schools as well as churches in her country and has "turned many to righteousness." I'm sure she spoke for the others when she declared in correspondence to me following the conference, "I can never be the same. My life has been touched and refreshed, my commitment renewed, my prayer life challenged; my goal is to reach the lost and win them to Christ." After viewing a film of the masses seeking Christ in a European crusade, she responded, "My heart cried for such a crusade for Swaziland."

One of the great resources of the Church of the Nazarene is its 350 itinerant evangelists. They represent an evangelistic force that God can use to reach thousands of people and start hundreds of churches. They need our prayers, our confidence, our appreciation, and our support.

▲ ▶ but let not adults yawn and turn the page. The subject is germane to all of life. Choices! Choices affecting our Christian life-style will always track us and we never outgrow the need for guidance in making right decisions, daily and long-range.

The authors have teamed up to share helpful insights into basic principles for holy living in a complex world. The theme is secular values versus the meaningful values expressed by Christ. Five related questions are probed: Who am I? Who is Christ? Who are my people? What is the purpose and meaning of life for me? and, For what and to whom am I responsible?

Wholeness comes to the individual as these interrelated questions are confronted and right choices made. Proper consideration of the questions brings fulfillment, productivity, and creativity, but the questions also "hold the potential to leave us confused, empty of purpose, and without a sense of community to support us."

Anyone whose background included the negatives of past decades will especially find the message of Choices liberating. The authors lift up Christ and show that a healthy relationship with Him, with others, and with ourselves is God's original intention for His people. Their philosophy lifts one far beyond binding dos and don'ts some of us once struggled to obey.

Choices is thought-provoking individual reading. But discussion questions probe each section deeply enough to make the five chapters excellent material for a class or small group, as well. The authors have come up with practical sermon material, too, preachers some good ideas that speak to contemporary concerns. It's one popular reading book you'll be glad to have.

the editor's STANDPOINT

"BE YE THANKFUL"

Thankfulness is not exclusively Christian, but ingratitude is definitely unchristian.

To be thankful is to recognize that others have made enriching contributions to your life. A thankless spirit is the essence of arrogance and marks the fool who gives himself credit for all the good that has befallen him. Jesus drew a perfect portrait of such a man, standing at the center of his life, pulling things toward himself with greedy fingers, and saying, "Mine, mine, mine." God called that man a fool.

To be thankful is to confess our dependence upon God and our interdependence with others. God is the Giver of every good gift, and others are often the channels by which those gifts reach our lives. Just as no man is an island, so no man is the creator and distributor of all the good with which his life is blessed.

A thankless man is lower than the dog who sleeps on his back porch. The dog will express thanks with his eyes and tail for every pat on the head, every dish of

"The way to a man's heart," says an old adage, "is through his stomach." Among the traits men once prized in a prospective wife was her ability to cook. Frozen dinners and microwave ovens have dealt the culinary art a severe blow.

The adage is not without its spiritual application. "Stomach evangelism" has often proved an excellent strategy for reaching others for Christ. Over a good meal, in a relaxed, cheerful atmosphere, you can frequently gain your best hearing for the gospel.

Christ himself supplies us with examples. He actually invited himself home for dinner with Zacchaeus. During the meal Zacchaeus underwent a dramatic conversion.

Another tax collector, Matthew, celebrated his conversion with "a great feast" where he introduced many of his friends to Christ. When the smug, self-righteous Pharisees objected, the diners heard these great words from Jesus: "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."

Jesus taught great truths in simple language at dinner food, and every riddance of fleas. By contrast, the will eat his meals, make his living, and take his posures without a nod or a mumble toward the Gody made it all possible. The lowest form of life is an grateful human being.

A group of ten lepers once approached Jesus, beg for the mercy of healing. He told them to go s themselves to the priest, and "as they went they cleansed." Immediately one of them turned back fell at Jesus' feet, giving Him thanks. Jesus as "Where are the nine?" They were somewhere afflice with a worse disease than leprosy—ingratitude rots the soul.

Jesus himself possessed a thankful spirit, and a stu of His thanksgiving, recorded in the Gospels, is a challenging exercise for His followers. We are never m like Him than when we are thankful, never less I Him than when we are ungrateful.

The Bible says, "Be ye thankful." That "ye" means and me.

tables. Since "no word from God shall be with power," we can assume that permanent benefits crued to the diners' lives.

I know several persons now serving Christ who w won to Him at dining tables. One of them is a past wife, reached for the Lord through a simple meal i humble home. Another found the Lord during a "a gate" lunch in a stadium parking lot before a coll football game. Others first gave serious heed to gospel while having Sunday dinner in the home Christian friends.

Eating together provides a splendid atmosphere quiet, intense evangelism. Many can articulate the witness well in this atmosphere who freeze up in m formally structured situations. Lost friends of bring up problems and needs during table-talk t give the Christian a splendid lead-in to conversat about Christ.

There are many ways to bear witness and to re others for the Lord. One of the finest proven meth is "stomach evangelism." a good meal, in a relaxed, cheerful atmosphere, can frequently gain your best hearing for the pel.

The flame of inspiration has been quenched iy worship services by disgruntled, dyspeptic members. The problem is compounded if the pitual grumblers are married to each other.

pubters on a committee are too many. One is nt for any purpose; more than one is an over-The Lord has promised that two who agree in hall receive what they pray for. But nowhere does the Bible promise victory or blessing to a pair who agree together to doubt the promises of God. Such cold water slingers can douse the fires of aspiration and achievement unless their chronic unbelief is resolutely rejected by others.

Two loafers are more than enough. The church needs willing workers. There is much to be done and too few doers. Some carry heavier loads than they should because others won't help. Ancient Jerusalem was rebuilt because "the people had a mind to work," to work persistently and cooperatively. Those who want the benefits without sharing the labor are found in all churches. Too many drones ruin the hive.

Two tightwads are too many. An oversupply of nontithers and reluctant givers can seriously retard the work of a church. I learned long ago that trying to squeeze money from such people is a waste of effort. You might as well try to squeeze water from a rock—or from an old sermon manuscript. The only solution to stinginess is holiness. Spirit-filled people are generous, as Acts 2 makes plain.

IAT GOD WILLS NOT

hings have positive existence; they exist as that Jod wills. Other things have negative existence; ist as that which God does not will.

ning with negative existence is not thereby unn is real, but God does not will sin. Death is real, d does not will death.

dmit that sin and death are real, but argue that, negative, they cannot be final or eternal. Yet cripture speaks of eternal sin and of that death is endless separation from God. The negative triumph but it will endure.

egative endures, is the will of God not thereby d? If sin and death continue forever, is the love thereby overcome? Philosophy and theology answer. We must ask, "Where is it written?" in Scripture does it say that the future, endless ce of sin and death means the triumph of dark over the God who is light? Or the victory of atred over the God who is love? We must allow God to define His own love. We must permit Him to define His own will. We cannot blink the scriptures that speak of eternal sin and suffering by complaining that they cannot be squared with our definitions of divine love and divine power.

Some of my seminary teachers were universalists. They denied the label but taught the concept. I asked one if he believed that Matthew 25:31-46 described the final judgment.

"I do," he replied.

"Well, Jesus speaks of the sheep entering eternal life and the goats eternal punishment. Nowhere in the parable, or in all Scripture, do the divided lines ever converge."

"That's true," he admitted. "But don't spoil my doctrine by dragging those scriptures into it."

The Bible sets an awesome choice before us—either God's will, which is holiness and life, or what God wills not, which is sin and death. You cannot evade the choice or its consequences. $\hfill\square$

DIRECTIONS IN CHURCH GROWTH

by RAYMOND HURN

ERRY APPLEBY, coordinator of Ethnic/Urban Missions, announced last February that seven new mission fields in the mainland U.S.A were entered in 1982.

- 1. Cambodian-now 12 works on 8 districts.
- 2. East Indian-now 2 works on 2 districts.
- 3. Ethiopian-1 work.
- 4. Filipino-now 4 works on 2 districts.
- 5. Samoan-now 3 works on 2 districts.
- 6. Laotian-now 8 works on 6 districts.
- 7. Vietnamese-now 4 works on 2 districts.

1983 has also witnessed the beginning of Italian/Greek work.

Nazarenes, with confidence, now speak of a "turnaround" in growth through starting new works and organizing them into new churches. The creation of new life is always a delicate and lifechanging moment, whether in human families or in denominational life. Babies are always born small and are created as an act of God himself. Human instrumentalities play vital roles in the birth process. The "birthing" of new congregations of people is never authentic unless that creation is the creation of Christ. Men may organize churches but only Christ himself creates the multiplied numbers of cells that form His great worldwide body. In "Nazarenedom," the birthing of new congregations slowed as the denomination reached its 60th year. The institutionalizing process began to burn more energy and effort with less and less vital commitment to the creation of new congregations.

The 1980s could well be remembered as the turning point in denominational life if the trends of the past three years indicate a pattern. We are discovering that new congregations worshiping in new places will more than double in the four-year period from 1980-83, compared with the previous quadrennium.

Three additional factors indicate a positive trend.

The first factor is the growing number of churches that have become sponsors of new outreach. Factor number two is the growing number of new works that are church-type missions (CTMs). They are new works not fully organized as yet. They conduct Sunday worship services but have not yet been officially organized or separated statistically from their sponsoring churches. Some of these have an attendance that ranges up to 300 in a weekly worship service.

Factor number three is the growing number of churches that sponsor language Sunday School classes. We now have in the United States, worship services each Sunday in 24 different languages, involving 41 separate nationality groupings.

The worldwide extension effort is cause for even greater joy. We have achieved three-fourths of our goal for the quinquennium in three years. The world extension goal for calendar years 1980-84 is 1,000 fully organized churches. The total new works launched in these three years is 735. If these trends continue, our 75th year could be our greatest year in extension effort.

Mature, strong leaders and pastors are stepping out of comfortable positions in growing numbers to do the apostolic work of church planting. Functionally, they are modern-day apostles making a similar commitment to "mission" that has been historic in the growth of Christianity. Ever-increasing numbers of pastors are also becoming sponsoringagency pastors for launching many of these new works. Twenty-five percent of all seminary graduates in the last three years have gone out to start new work. A climate of faith and confidence is growing among us.

At the vanguard of the church growth movement have been district superintendents and district Church Growth Committees. They have functioned effectively from 1976 into the 1980s. Extensive church growth training has led to closer examination of church planting as a vital factor in the growth of religious movements. Motivational and inspirational conferences on church planting have been held in almost every section of the church in North America.

One thousand new fully organized churches worldwide is a definite possibility as we approach the end of this quinquennium.

IT TOOK A MIRACLE

by EARL SCOTT MANN

HE MEDICAL STAFF and I did all we could, using the medical technology available to us. The recovery of your father was not from what modern technology could do, but it was from the Lord above. It truly was a miracle. All we could do was not enough; the Lord provided the miracle to save your father." With these words, Dr. Frank Revis excused himself, left our presence with tears in his eyes, and returned to his rounds in the hospital.

My mind drifted back to Friday morning, November 26, when Dad was scheduled for a heart catheterization at ten o'clock. As we stepped off the elevator at nine that morning, the nurse at the door told us that Dad had been taken into I.C.U. and that the doctor would speak to us as soon as he could. Late that evening, Dr. Revis called the family into the conference room and gave us the facts on Dad's condition. Half of Dad's heart was dead and the other half was dying. At this point, there was little hope for survival. It would take a miracle from the Lord.

The next evening, at about six o'clock, Dr. Revis called the family into the conference room again. He began by saying, "Your father is very seriously ill. He is dying. We are going to place him on the respirator and sedate him so he won't fight the respirator. This will help to relax his heart and it will just be a matter of time. I will do all that is medically possible to help him. Your father is a remarkable human being and has a strong will to live. But that is not enough to pull him through this situation. You pray for the Lord to work a miracle and I will pray for the Lord to guide in what I do."

I was beside myself with grief and pain at the thought of losing Dad. "Now where is your great Lord and Savior?" the devil was saying to me. At that moment I fell on my knees and prayed. "Lord, not my will but Your will be done. If it would be Your will, let us keep Dad just a little longer, but if You need him, then don't let him suffer. Just take him home with You. O God, I remember that You gave the greatest Christmas gift that I have ever had, and He is my wonderful Lord. He has said, 'And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If he shall ask any thing in my name, I will do it.' Lord, all I want for Christmas is that Dad would live, if it be Your will. Amen."

About 9:30 Sunday night, some of the church people from our local church came to see us at the I.C.U. waiting room. My wife, Patty Jean, and I were to spend the night at the hospital, and they had stopped after church to check on Dad's condition. They had only been there about 10 minutes when Dr. Revis came out of I.C.U. to report on Dad's situation.

"It is a miracle. Your father is showing signs of recovery and it is impossible by all medical standards. It is just medically impossible that he should be alive. I have been with him all day and I did not want to tell you until now. I had to see this miracle happen, and it is from the Lord above. It was just a wonderful miracle of the Lord's love."

After Dr. Revis left we stared at each other for a few minutes and then began to cry and laugh at the same time. The Lord had provided a miracle.

Dad is home now, recovering from his massive heart attack. The doctor had said he would never walk again, but he has been walking; that he would never be able to speak again, but he is talking and praising the Lord. He is a gift from the Lord. This miracle has pulled our family closer together, and our church family has gained greater insights into what a wonderful Lord we are serving.

opinion and putting the official Nazarene stamp of approval on it.* His opinions are not my opinions. 1 Corinthians 9:22 states, "I have become all things to all men so that by all possible means, I might save some." How do we dare dictate to the Lord or tie His hands when it comes to reaching out? As a board member of First Church of the Nazarene in Wichita, Kansas, I will use my influence in whatever way possible to win the lost, by whatever means we have at our disposal.

May I observe that we too often confuse our own personal tastes with "spiritual" evaluation? The arguments which German put forth in condemnation of rock, along with other arguments seen in such articles, can be applied as well to the immensely popular "Country and Western" sound which permeates gospel music in most of the United States. Yet one rarely, if ever, hears preachers condemning contemporary country gospel because secular country music is heard in bars, often carries lyrics about alcohol and illicit sex, and is sung by performers who lead less than exemplary lives. Could that be because those who are most likely to write stinging articles and scathing sermons happen to like country music and dislike rock music?

The history of Christianity is filled with stories of those who condemned that which they did not understand or like. Let's not join that rank, especially in official print.*

AGREE WITH "OBJECTION"

You stated so well what I have been proclaiming to my church board, my own two teenagers, and the Sunday School classes I teach (Junior and Senior High). I have been a Christian and a Nazarene for 30 years, am a graduate of Olivet, and much involved in the musical aspect of worship. More than once I have walked out of the sanctuary because the music was very offensive. Mrs. Nadine Anderson Orange Park, Florida

Here's my ditto to Dale German's article. As a Sunday School teacher, I realize full well that we must cater to the tastes of our young people as well as we mature ones, but with so-called Christian rock, we have such deep deleterious results for all. Furthermore, surely there is enough of this late 20th century type music in the air waves and on the TV tube to satisfy even the most ardent fan. Church is for spiritual music and matters, pleasing to our Lord and conducive to prayer and praise to

Florence K. E. Carlson Los Alamitos, California

I agree. Is it possible that our holiness church is compromising with music that has a satanic rhythm? I pray not. Please, let's keep the Nazarene church away from this type of so-called music. Let's stay "holy unto God." Gloria Reck

Marysville, Ohio

The argument I hear is that "it can reach the kids." But it still leaves me cold. And I think the term, "Christian rock," has about as much validity as "Christian pornography." There ain't no such thing! Ralph Taylor Bourbonnais, Illinois

A very timely and well-written article for our day when cheap so-called music is being used by many individuals and churches as well as radio stations. A resounding amen for the continuing use of the many inspired hymns that have stood the test of time and remain sacred today!

ONE MORE CALL!

by BESSIE ROBBINS

FELT A BIT DISCOURAGED with my door-todoor Sunday School calling that afternoon. I was getting no results and was ready to go home. Then I spied these girls playing together on a front lawn and decided to chat with them. When asked if they attended Sunday School, one girl responded, with interest, that she did not but would like to. She was very excited about it, so I asked her to take me to her home.

As Marilyn and I walked the few blocks to her home, I had the awareness that God had brought us together and was leading me now. Her parents greeted me, and when I told them my mission, they related to me how they had stayed awake late the night before, reading the Bible and searching for—they really did not know what. They were so open and so obviously hungry that I knew God had led me to them. They assured me that they would be in Sunday School.

Bill and Juanita began attending Sunday School with their lovely family. It was all very new to them, but the Holy Spirit was faithful and found no resistance in Juanita. She soon yielded her heart to Christ and was beautifully saved. What a joy it was to watch her grow! She was so radiant as she told of the love God had put in her heart for everyone. Even though many years have passed, I am inspired as I recall her saying, "I thought I loved my family before, and I did, but, oh, I never knew such love as I have now!"

We moved from this church and had not kept in contact with Juanita and her family. Recently, however, I talked with her pastor's wife and learned that Marilyn, the girl who led me to her family, is faithfully serving in the church. I've been so grateful that God didn't let me go home too soon that day.

20 HERALD OF HOLINESS

Revival Fires Burn at CANADIAN CONFERENCE

T HAPPENED at the center of the land of the maple leaf. From the Pacific to the Atlantic, from Vancouver Island to Newfoundland, from the Yukon and south of the U.S./Canadian border, came hundreds of Nazarenes to Canadian Nazarene College and Fort Garry Church of the Nazarene for the first all-Canadian Conference on Evangelism. Attendance surpassed the expectations of conference planners by several hundred.

From the opening fanfare and the singing of the dominion's national anthem, "O Canada!" on Tuesday evening, October 4, to the benediction after the evening service on Thursday, a spirit of revival prevailed over the conference.

The five Canadian district superintendents shared the vision God had given them for their respective districts. Each superintendent was committed to church growth through members joining by profession of faith and new churches being planted in their areas. The hearty amens of the conference participants indicated they were telling God and their superintendents, "We agree, and we want to be in on this dominion-wide crusade to win souls and build churches across Canada."

Dr. Donald Bastian, Canadian bishop of the Free Methodist Church, was the keynote speaker. He confronted the conference with the message of the Cross and its implications for us as we seek to evangelize in Canada today. God ministered through His servant and every participant felt God's presence and heard His voice.

Then came that breath of revival as people moved from all over the sanctuary to kneel at the altar and the front pews, which had to be vacated for the seekers. The church was filled with the cries of brokenness, confession, and commitment. The sanctifying Spirit came to cleanse, refine, and energize hearts that were yielded to Him. Inspiration and challenge came to the conference through Spirit-filled resource personnel. People will never forget the impact God made on their lives through Dr. Paul Orjala and his message on incarnational ministries, or through the ministry of Dr. James Garlow as he related the thrilling story of church planting at Metroplex Chapel in Dallas/Fort Worth. General Superintendent Charles H. Strickland brought a God-anointed message on scriptural holiness and challenged us to evangelize in the power of the Spirit. Truly these men were God's instruments for the Canadian conference.

Wednesday night, God again came on the scene as Dr. Strickland ministered. Scores of people responded to the challenge to live lives of holiness to the glory of God. There was rejoicing as they claimed or reclaimed the blessing or made new commitments of their lives to God. There was victory in the camp!

In discussion groups and seminars, participants dealt with the subjects of lay ministry, church planting, cell groups, creative evangelism, prayer and revival, and the biblical basis of evangelism.

But discussion groups and seminars, reports, and even coffee breaks were forgotten on Thursday morning as the winds of God swept across the gathering. After Dr. James Garlow preached, without any appeal, people began to move to the altar. It was a time of refreshing from the Spirit of the Lord. Needs were met, new commitments were made, sick bodies were touched, and Canadian Nazarenes were gloriously revived. They could never be the same again after that service.

What happened in the Canadian Conference on Evangelism is a high point in Canadian Nazarene history. Never before has there been anything like it. Nazarenes returned to their churches ablaze for Christ, with a new commitment to God and the Great Commission to evangelize. They were going home to win souls by all means, to strengthen small churches, to build new churches, to spread scriptural holiness from sea to sea across the great Dominion of Canada.

"He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth. They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him \dots " (Psalm 72:8-9a).

MVNC ANNOUNCES NEW FACULTY AT INSTITUTE

Mount Vernon Nazarene College held its annual faculty institute August 24-25 and announced the addition of eight new faculty for the 1983-84 school year.

Patricia Hambrick has been named director of the Learning Center and assistant professor of education. Hambrick received her first master's degree in elementary education and her second in gifted education from Marshall University (WVa.). Since 1974, Hambrick has been a math specialist in the Gifted Department in the Cabell County Public School System in Huntington, WVa.

John W. Taylor has been named band director and assistant professor of instrumental music. Taylor earned his master's degree in music education from Indiana University and his bachelor's degree in music education from Bowling Green State University in 1977. For the past year, Taylor has taught at Taylor University (Ind.) on a one-year appointment as director of instrumental ensembles. He was also director of bands at Elmwood Local Schools in Bloomingdale, Ohio, in June 1977.

Stanley Galloway will join the staff as an instructor in English. This summer, he completed his master's degree requirements in creative writing and literature from Kansas State University. A 1981 graduate of Northwest Nazarene College, Galloway has taught English Composition I and II at Kansas State University.

Kristi Spinnie will join the faculty as assistant instructor of secretarial administration. Spinnie received her bachelor's degree in business administration at Northwest Nazarene College. She has taught in the public school system in Caldwell, Ida.

Jim Skon will join the faculty as an instructor in computer science. Skon earned his bachelor's degree in computer science from MVNC in 1980 and his master's degree in computer science from the Ohio State University in 1982. During 1980-83, he assisted in the management and software support on a VAX-750 in the research facility at Ohio State.

Tim Myatt will join the faculty as an instructor in mathematics and computer science. Myatt received his bachelor's degree in computer science and mathematics from MVNC in 1981 and completed the requirements for his master's degree in computer science from OSU this summer.

Eric Forseth will join the faculty as an instructor in physical education. He will also be head athletic trainer and head soccer coach. Forseth earned his bachelor's degree in education and physical education from Northwest Nazarene College and completed his requirements for a master's degree in physical education from the University of Arizona this summer.

Mike Dapprich will join the faculty as an assistant instructor in physical education and head basketball coach. Dapprich earned his bachelor's degree in physical education from Spring Arbor College (Mich.) in 1967 and his master's degree in physical education from Michigan State University in 1968. Prior to coming to MVNC, Dapprich worked at Spring Arbor College as admissions counselor, supervising teacher for P.E., and women's track coach. During 1980-81, he served as interim head basketball coach.

MVNC HAS SECOND HIGHEST ENROLLMENT

Mount Vernon Nazarene College marked its 16th year of higher education with 1,052 students.

The 1983 fall enrollment is the second highest in MVNC history. The college's highest figure came in 1981, when 1,060 students registered for classes.

MVNC has more than 22 percent of its students coming from the Knox County area. A freshman class of 275 is enrolled at MVNC, which is an increase of 12 over last year. The school also has 64 area residents who are enrolled in the adult studies program. \Box

UPPER GREAT LAKES PIONEER AREA HOLDS MINI-ASSEMBLY

On October 13, 1908, at Pilot Point, Tex., the Pentecostal Church of the Nazarene was born. This gathering of holiness groups was a product of the 19th-century holiness revival. It resulted in a new denomination of 288 churches with 10,414 members. Five years later the Michigan District of the Church of the Nazarene was established.

On Wednesday, July 13, 1983, pastors and delegates from 112 churches on the Michigan District adopted a resolution to create a "pioneer area" of administration for the 25 northernmost churches on the district. Presiding General Superintendent Dr. Jerald D. Johnson said this concept had been used successfully in world mission areas for a number of years, but this is the first attempt in the United States.

The Reed City church agreed to share its pastor, Rev. Milton Hoose, with the pioneer area as its leader. Remaining a part of, and accountable to, the Michigan District during the experiment, Rev. Hoose will work closely with District Superintendent C. Neil Strait. A program of ministry will be designed to strengthen the present churches while establishing new congregations.

On August 12, 1983, the first "miniassembly" of the Upper Great Lakes Pioneer Area was held at the Albright United Methodist Campground near Reed City, Mich. Nearly 250 people were in attendance, with 101 delegates voting to elect a slate of officers comparable to that of a regular district.

Three additional churches had been added by this time, for a total of 28 fully organized churches plus 3 church planting endeavors in Grayling, Petoskey, and Oscoda. This represents 1,500 church members, 1,600 in Sunday School average attendance, 1,800 in the morning service, and $900,000 raised for all purposes in 1982-83.

Elected to the Coordinating Council were elders Alan C. Campbell and Jerry Ulrich; and laymen James Bowman and William Watson. Elected as coordinators for NWMS, NYI, and CL/SS were Mrs. Ed (Roberta) Cramer, Rev. Jerry Batterbee, and Rev. Mark Moore, respectively. Rev. Almon Fulton was elected as secretary-treasurer.

Councils for NWMS, NYI, and CL/SS were elected in the areas of Home Missions, Church Growth, Camp Meeting, and Evangelism.

A special feature of the miniassembly was the presentation by Mrs. Russ Bredholt, media consultant to Media Services, of television spots to be test-marketed in the pioneer area of CBS affiliate TV channels 9 and 10. These spots, broadcast in the month of October, were financed on a matching fund basis with Media Services. A spontaneous offering of $3,800 in cash and pledges was received at the district assembly in July for this purpose.

The entire mini-assembly was characterized by a conviction that God had led to this place. It was a tribute to the 75th anniversary of the Church of the Nazarene to begin a new plan of action for the growth of God's kingdom in the United States.

STRATEGY FOR NURTURING AND EQUIPPING NAZARENE FAMILIES

J. Paul and Marilyn Turner recently participated in a week-long training lab for intergenerational family ministries. The lab was facilitated by Dr. Margaret Sawin of Rochester, N.Y. Dr. Sawin is the creator of the family cluster concept, and founder of Family Clusters, Inc., of Rochester.

The Turners were assigned to two different clusters, each comprised of eight families plus 23 other trainees. The family clusters met for 12 sessions during the week, 8 of which were led by the trainees. After each session, the trainees were evaluated. The trainees also participated in 5 afternoon workshops on theory and skill-building.

In conjunction with this training, the Turners have been working with a newly formed steering committee from the Division of Christian Life and Sunday School. The committee's purpose is to lay the groundwork for, and give guidance to, the development of a Nazarene expression of intergenerational family ministries. Division members include: Dennis Apple, Miriam Hall, Larry Leonard, Beula Postlewait, Ken Rice, Phil Riley, and Gary Sivewright. Nazarene Chaplain (LTC) Ken Clements is serving the committee as consultant and resource person. Chaplain Clements is currently serving as director of Marriage and Family Ministries for the U.S. Army, and is stationed at Fort Monmouth, N.J.

Current plans for the committee are to develop specific objectives from an existing mission statement. Field testing and refinement of intergenerational family clusters are a part of the overall strategy for 1984. With a marriage enrichment ministry already functioning, a family enrichment ministry will give balance to the nurturing and equipping efforts of the division.

GALLUP POLL FINDS RELIGIOUS INTEREST UP BUT COMMITMENT

AT LOW LEVEL. Most adult Americans are more interested in religion than they were five years ago, although fewer than half say they participate in religious activities, according to a Gallup poll. The survey, conducted for the Christian Broadcasting Network, also found that Americans have a growing belief that religion can answer the problems of the world, while faith in science to solve those problems has dropped.

Among 1,209 adults surveyed July 23-31 by telephone, 57 percent said they were more interested in religious and spiritual matters than five years ago. However, only 41 percent said they recently had taken part in religious activities other than worship services.

Asked if they were more likely today than five years ago to believe that religion could answer the problems of the world, 54 percent said yes and 26 percent said no. Thirty-six percent said they were more likely than five years ago to believe science could solve the world's problems, while 47 percent said they were less likely to hold that belief.

Of those polled, 60 percent said they were Protestants, 27 percent said they were Catholics, 3 percent were Jewish, 1 percent were Orthodox, and the others listed no religion or another faith.

EVANGELICAL CHURCHES IN POLAND ARE GROWING. Evangelical churches in Poland are growing in substantial numbers, reports Walter Zurfluh of the Eatern European Mission. "While previously there were only one or two baptisms a year in some churches, those same churches are now reporting a dozen or more annually," he said after a trip there. He also noted a growing, widespread interest in the Bible among Poland's Roman Catholics. "Priests are requesting Bibles from evangelical pastors, even accepting Protestant editions when Catholic versions are not available," he said. He guoted one Polish evangelist as saying, "In Poland generally there is a continuing interest in the Bible. It is a wonderful and amazing spiritual awakening, which has never before happened to such a great extent."

ZONDERVAN BUYS UP REVELL, BENSON IN LATEST EXPANSION MOVES. A major trend in evangelical publishing was signaled by the outright purchase by the Zondervan Corporation of two major publishing concerns in the U.S. and a British publishing combine. Zondervan, already the largest of the evangelical houses in the U.S. with earnings that will gross in excess of $100 million this year, now will also control a sizeable portion of the British conservative religious market, according to Eternity magazine.

Acquired by Zondervan in a series of lightning quick deals were the century old Fleming H. Revell Company of Tappan, N.J., for $10 million; the remaining 49 percent ownership of the Benson Company of Nashville, an evangelical music publishing company; and full ownership (the remaining two-thirds interest) of the Britain-based Marshall-Pickering Holdings Ltd.

We welcome questions on biblical and doctrinal matters. The editor is not able to send replies to questions not selected for publication. Address: ANSWER CORNER, Herald of Holiness, 6401 The Paseo, Kansas City, MO 64131.

Why does the NIV translate Numbers 22:20 the way it does? I realize from a check with Strong's concordance that both "if" and "since" along with "when" are allowable translations of the Hebrew term. In light of subsequent events, the KJV interpretation makes much more sense. Adam Clarke agrees with this and cites Hebrew usage in the following verse in support. It might also be that message was spoken in some other language where the distinction was more explicit. Is it not good logically (not to mention theologically) to consider that God would judge a person for jumping the gun on a contingency rather than for following a logical course in light of a completed event? It might be that his very anxiousness itself was objectionable, but it is hard to see this as an adequate explanation.

Not having been party to the discussions of the translators, I cannot tell you why they made their choice of words.

However, the "if" in KJV, and the "since" in NIV, do not mark a difference between "contingency" and "completed event." The fact is, the delegation from Balak had come and called for Balaam to curse Israel.

God had said, "You shall not go with them" (v. 12). When they came the second time, offering Balaam a larger reward for his services, the prophet said, "Tarry here this night, that I may know what the Lord will say to me more." This is the crux of the matter. God had spoken. Israel was His people, not to be cursed for He had blessed them. He had nothing more to say. God is not like a greedy prophet, changing His mind because larger honors are proffered.

Now God says, "Go with them." In other words, "You will not consent to My will; have your own way." But God does not approve the sin He per- mits, and so "God's anger was kindled because he went." God does not coerce any man to do His will, but He ultimately spoils the "reward" man seeks in preferring his own way. Balaam was allowed to go, but not to curse Israel, and therefore he both incurred divine anger and forfeited human honors.

Balaam's sin was no trifle. That little word "more" in verse 19 represents the prophet's attempt to involve God in his own greed, to make God over into his own image. He slandered the character of God and when God then said, "Go," He "gave them up to his own heart's lust," as Matthew Henry long ago put it.

So it was not Balaam's "anxiousness" that was objectionable. It was his greed that caused him to set aside God's will and to regard God as morally fickle when bribes are enlarged. It was a heinous sin justly punished.

If a person has been a member of "The First Church of the Nazarene" and the church was sold, is that person still considered a member of the Nazarene church proper?

Membership is held in a local church, but not in its property. Selling a property would not dissolve the church, and a person would continue to be a member of the Church of the Nazarene in that place.

However, under certain circumstances a church may be disorganized (Manual, par. 106). In that case, a person's continuing membership in the Church of the Nazarene would depend upon the transfer of his membership to another local church prior to the disorganization.

My question concerns tithing. Should our tithes be paid on our personal earnings before government taxes are taken out or after they are deducted? We pay ours before the government gets our taxes, in other words, from the top.

Good for you. "Before," not "after," is the right answer to your question. We should not pay our taxes with our tithes. The taxes are for "Caesar," the tithe is the Lord's.

The General Church Property Committee supervises the purchase of property, the utilization of property, the construction of new buildings, and additions to existing structures. Members are skilled in the science of demographics, construction, and finance, and they guide the general church in these areas. Pictured (l. to r.) are: Paul Spear, director of Headquarters Services; Dr. Bob Foster, vice-president in charge of finance, Point Loma Nazarene College; Dr. Virgil Grover, superintendent of the Minnesota District; Willard Friesen, lumberman and developer from Oregon; and D. J. Burk, highway and bridge building from southern Missouri. Don Cain, banker with agribusiness interests in Arkansas and Kansas, is not pictured as business commitments prevents his attending the meeting. The committee is pictured touring the NPH facilities. The focal point for this meeting was to review and approve developing interests of the publishing house at the present and also into the future.

REVIVAL BRINGS REVIVAL

The Craig, Colo., church started revival in February and since then has seen over 20 people accept Christ. When Evangelist Robert Morris came to hold revival services, the church was already in revival. Because of the spirit of revival, the services had the greatest attendance the church had ever seen. Many people made decisions; several were saved, Christians were sanctified, and the church as a whole was strengthened. Rev. C. O. Prichett believed it was the "greatest revival because of what was already happening."

A man from the church had been witnessing to one of his employees for some time. She was living a wasted life full of drugs and drinking and had been living with a man. The employer invited her to the revival, and one night she visited the services. That night she went to the altar and gave her life to Christ. She testified that "the emptiness in my life is filled." A great change took place in her life and she was excited about living for Christ.

Two weeks later this young lady invited a friend she worked with to come to church. She too accepted Christ and both young women are planning to join the church.

In three services there was more than one altar service: in one service people were at the altar three different times.

PENSIONS RECEIVES GIFT CHECK

Recently, a letter arrived in the Pensions office from Mrs. Thelma L. Hartman of St. Louis. Mrs. Hartman, widowed five years ago, sent with her letter a gift check and a poem to honor the 75th anniversary of her late husband's birthday. Since Rev. Fred E. Hartman was born on October 8, 1908, this special gift coincided with the month and year of the 75th anniversary of the Church of the Nazarene!

Dean Wessels, administrator of the Board of Pensions, reports this gift will be used by the Board of Pensions for the continued ministry to retired ministers and their widowed spouses. Over the years many such gifts have been received from generous individuals.

DIAMOND JUBILEE NEW CHURCH GOAL SURPASSED

The Diamond Jubilee goal of organizing 75 new churches in one day worldwide has been exceeded by at least 100, according to Dr. Raymond W. Hurn, director of Church Extension Ministries, Church of the Nazarene. Reports received in the denominational headquarters office, October 23, 1983, indicate that 62 new Nazarene churches were organized in the United States and Canada with an additional 117 in the six world mission areas.

This total of 179 Nazarene churches in one day brings the denomination within reach of the year-long goal (September 1, 1983, to August 31, 1984) of 228 new churches worldwide.

The international nature of the Church of the Nazarene is reflected in the fact that 27 of the 62 new churches in the United States and Canada organized October 23, 1983, were among ethnic groups such as Blacks, Hispanics, Samoans, Koreans, North American Indians, and French.

Wall plaques designating them as Diamond Jubilee Churches have been sent to these 179 new Nazarene churches organized on this one day, commemorating the 75th anniversary of the denomination.

CHURCH BURNS

District Superintendent Arthur Mottram has reported a church on the Missouri District at Brosely, Mo., was completely destroyed by fire on September 27. The loss was covered by fire insurance.

Rev. Preston Palmer is the pastor and states that the church will continue with services being held in a school building two blocks away until the church can be rebuilt. \Box

District Superintendent Julian Gunn is shown receiving charter members into the Nazlini, Ariz., Church of the Nazarene. This Navajo Indian church was one of the 179 Diamond Jubilee churches organized October 23 worldwide. The congregation meets in a Navajo hogan-style building.

The exterior of the hogan-style log structure, shown partially completed, is the home for the new Nazlini, Ariz., Navajo Indian church.
