Entrance of Proposed Enlarged and Improved Administration Building as approved by the Building Committee at a recent meeting. Prospectus of entire building will appear in the next issue.

Needs of Northwest Nazarene College as seen t

More Room at N. N. C.

THE proposed enlargement of the Administration Building at Northwest Nazarene College is more than a visionary desire on the part of an aggressive president and faculty but it is a thing born of a necessity which is but the natural result of a healthy, growing condition of the institution.

The over crowded condition of the chapel, the lack of room in the library and the inadequacy of the science laboratories are the three things that impressed the writer with the settled conviction that immediate enlargement proceedings are consistent and imperative.

R. J. PLUMB

WHILE attending a meeting of the Board of Regents at Northwest Nazarene College it was my privilege to look over carefully all buildings and equipment of the Institution. After personally viewing the crowded conditions as they are, my conclusion is that we must have more room if we hope to properly care for the student body that God has entrusted to our care, and that we must not fail to do so.

M. G. JOBE

Two Reasons for Building

I HAVE been in touch with N. N. C. for over fourteen years. Two things that have kept my faith in the college are: First, the abiding presence of the Spirit of God. In my first visit there I was made conscious of the presence of God, and have witnessed some great manifestations of His power. In my last visit there in October 1930, I was again assured of the presence of God. This is the greatest advertising feature a Holiness School can have. Second, there has been a steady growth all the while in spite of the debts and other hindering forces. Growth demands room, so we have two of the best reasons in the world for enlarging the plant. God is there, and students are there. Let us arise and build, and give them a chance to evangelize the world.

LEWIS E. HALL

A New Challenge To N. N. C.

THE first challenge to N. N. C. was the education of our young men and women for religious leadership in our church. How well she has met this obligation is evidenced by the number of her graduates now in the pastorate, the mission field, or doing the work of an evangelist. We must not lessen our efforts along this line, but another obligation is now at our doors, the education of our young folks to go out into the scholastic and business worlds and take their places along side of those educated in other institutions. To do this, we must have more room to accommodate the number of students who desire to get their education in an institution where they are surrounded by a Christian atmosphere. Also we must have more room to be a fully accredited college. Northwest Educational Zone can and will build a greater N. N. C.

S. W. TRUE

I am writing you a few words to express my appreciation for the privilege of attending the recent meeting of the Board of Regents of the Northwest Nazarene College. I am sure that no one could view the splendid student body with their happy faces and glowing testimonies without realizing the noble manhood and womanhood in these young soldiers of King Emanuel, and not be desirous of helping them in every way to reach the high ideal of Christian education.

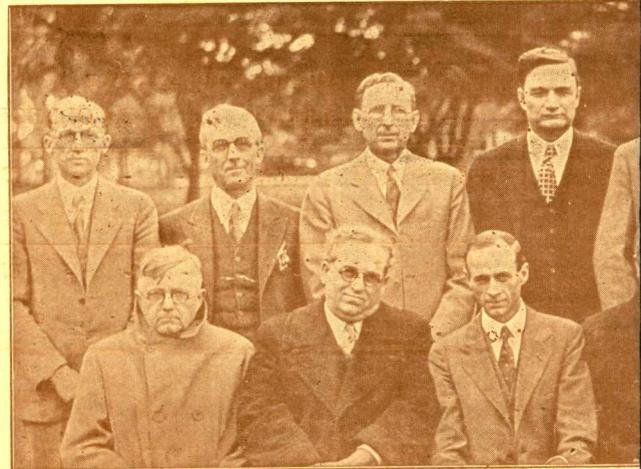

To do this it is necessary to provide more and better room both for Chapel and class room work. I believe the plans as adopted by this educational zone are feasible and workable, and with prayer and wisdom can be carried to a successful conclusion. To this end I stand ready to lend all assistance possible to the glory of God and the upbuilding of His kingdom.

EARL C. POUNDS

WE are glad to say that our school, Northwest Nazarene College, is counted among the best in Idaho and other States in efficiency and is climbing rapidly in this. We have a high standard of learning and an intense, sweet-spirited atmosphere where the students find God and are built up in the most Holy Faith. While visiting our school in October we saw twenty-five or more young people at the altar at one time.

But Oh, the sad and severe lack of room. The Chapel is over-crowded even to the platform. The Library accommodates only half of the student body. There is no adequate science room. What shall our students do? Shall we turn some away? It may be your boy or girl. Shall we restrict our enrollment? It may effect your child. We cannot do this. Shall we offend the God we love by failing to provide room in our school for His young soldiers? A thousand times "No." We will arise and build. Let "More Room" be our slogan. We can, we must and we will.

Our Overcrowded College Buildings

THE encouraging increase in the student body of Northwest Nazarene College within the past three years has overcrowded all the buildings now on the campus and caused an emergency which demands immediate enlargement of our capacity. It has been the delight of all our people throughout the Northwest Zone that the College has made such excellent progress in clearing up the old debts, in improving the Campus, in the employment of a most competent faculty, and in securing accredited standing. This has contributed toward making the College an attractive place for young people who are seeking their education. So, if we are to meet the demands of our enlarging student body and maintain a high standard of Christian education, we are compelled to enlarge our building capacity. Our survey of the buildings during the meeting of the Board of Regents impressed every member of the Board with the necessity of making immediate provision for larger quarters to get our excellent student body out of such cramped conditions, and continue the wonderful work the College is doing.—A. M. BOWES

THE willingness of faculty and student body to work steadily on, under the sore handicap of utterly inadequate room and provision for their work and numbers, constitutes to our mind, one of the finest examples of loyalty and devotion to be found anywhere in the Church of the Nazarene. We know of no need in all our Church surpassing that of our School, The Northwest Nazarene College of Nampa, Idaho. May God help us to get behind 100 per cent, a building program commensurate with our need and ability.
 DONNELL J. SMITH

RECENTLY I concluded a visit to Northwest Nazarene College, being a member of the Board of Regents and the representative from the North Dakota District. I deem it a privilege to have met with that Board of able men and taken part in their deliberations. The Board of Regents are aggressive in their desires for Northwest Nazarene College and acted in accordance with what they considered a very urgent need. I say need. Indeed there is a need at the college. Particularly a need of a larger and more commodious administration building. They are crowded everywhere in the present building. The institution is blessed with as fine a student body as can be found anywhere. If we hold these young people, and so many of them, we will have to give them better equipment, more and sufficiently large class rooms, study hall, science equipment and a much larger chapel. They can hardly be expected to remain through the full academic training in such crowded quarters. The present building was designed to accommodate a much smaller student body than what we now have. It has served its day.

A Real Need

WHILE visiting Northwest Nazarene College last week, in the meeting of the Board of Regents, I took a tour of the buildings, for I wanted to see what provision had been made for the caring for the great body of students who had come there from all parts of the educational zone and some from outside. I visited class rooms, library, lecture rooms and dormitories, and in every case I found a crowded condition, which I am sure if every member of this educational zone could see, would stir him to quick action. Building programs may have been launched by some of our institutions when it was not a question of real need, but in the case of Northwest Nazarene College, we simply must build to make room for the students God is sending to us. One room in which one of Professor DeLong's classes meet, is supposed to seat about thirty people and his class numbers around sixty, and this is only one incident; the Dining Room is full and running over; the Chapel is so crowded that some must stand along the wall and some sit out in the hall; the Library is crowded until the students must be accommodated in shifts; the class rooms are so crowded that it seems impossible to give the students what they justly deserve. Then, when I remember that these students had come here from high schools and colleges where every equipment is offered for the demonstration of courses, I really felt ashamed that we should ask them to come to our schools that are so poorly equipped. The student body is the finest I think I have ever seen. God has sent them to us, so let's arise and build buildings and properly furnish them so as not to disappoint this great body of young men and women, who are the Nazarene leaders of tomorrow.

The imperative need of Northwest Nazarene College as I see it is adequate buildings, better equipment and more room. We must enlarge our school to meet the pressing needs of a now overcrowded student body. We must give them equipment in the form of laboratories, libraries and class rooms that will meet with present educational demands. We must have buildings of such architecture and attractive design as are worthy of a college. To progress is necessary to our existence—to progress for us is to enlarge.

I favor heartily your present program.

E. E. MARTIN
Chairman of Board of Directors

There is one very apparent need at Northwest Nazarene College—Room, Room, Room. The chapel is about as large as the chapel platform or stage should be. It is impossible for the student body to crowd into the chapel and visitors must be turned away as though they were not welcome.

The city of Nampa does not know we have a school as far as their seeing any of our activities. Nampa is unable to appreciate our talent. The students come. They are of the best but oh, so crowded. Let's pray for more room—then pay for more room.

F. R. McCONNELL
Director

"And the end is not yet Praise the Lord!" Here they come — more students — more young life — pastors, evangelists, missionaries, teachers, etc. — our future Church; literally crowding out the walls of the buildings of Northwest Nazarene College, demanding more room. What to do? Well, what would Jesus do? I think your answer must be "Make room". As a matter of fact we cannot afford to do otherwise.

THE WORK HAS BEGUN! At this writing the excavation is complete. The sound of the cement mixer is music in my ears. Today we are running the footings for the walls of our chapel annex. Soon we will be making bricks. Pray for us, believe with us, and help us to build a GREATER N. N. C.

In pastoral visiting we sometimes find a small house and a large family. Some questions naturally arise. How do they get along? Where do they put their furniture and their clothes? Where do they sleep? How do they entertain company? A few days visit in such a home reveals how the wife and mother by deft management accomplishes what seems impossible. But every one is glad when they can add to their home. For some time we have wondered how N. N. C. in its crowded condition manages. How do they get along?

A visit there reveals that it has been done by shifting classes, crowding the chapel, running the study hall and library in shifts and so on. Now every body is pleased that there is to be more room for them.

Secretary of Board of Directors

"Where There is no Vision the People Perish"

I thank God that in His providence we were brought in closer touch with Northwest Nazarene College, which has enlarged our vision of the importance of our school to meet the future needs of the church in its great calling to carry the Gospel message of a full salvation to the ends of the earth.

During the few years we have been in these parts, we have noted with much joy the growth and development of our school.

By investigation we find that N. N. C. has outgrown its present equipment, and an overcrowded condition exists in all departments. The chapel is far too small to accommodate the present growing need.

Let us rise and build. Don't lose the vision.

G. A. FINCH, Director

THIS is the third year that we have been over-crowded. Our students have stood loyally. The enrollment is remarkable. How long can we hold our students unless we alleviate the present unsatisfactory conditions?

Our chapel is so crowded that it is impossible to have a satisfactory altar service. Library facilities are simply no longer bearable.

Shall we limit our student body or shall we enlarge? This question will be answered by your response to the present appeal.

You can make your money count doubly. We plan to make our own brick with student help and thus assist many worthy young men. Send in your gift and by so doing help us build and assist students.

Fill out enclosed 'brick', and return at once.

Your president,
